STAR MATADORS OPEN SEASON

Two of Spain's Best Men Vanquish Three Fierce Animals Each
Seville, Spain.—In a blaze of sunshine and a scene of high excitement, such as only a Spanish bullfight can produce, the bullfighting season for the south of Spain opened last week.

The greatest fight of the day took place in the bull ring at 4 p.m., when Rafael Gomez, nicknamed El Gallo (The Cock) and Ricardo Torres, otherwise Bombita (Firework), two of the greatest living matadors, were engaged to meet three bulls each. Gallo is a born fighter, as were his father and grandfather before him. His total of bulls killed is between 1800 and 2000, and only one bad accident has befallen him.

The yearly earnings of a successful fighter are very large, the average fee being $1350 per fight, but even in Spain Gallo has been paid $1750, while in Mexico this has been doubled. There was certainly nothing fierce about the bulls during the exhibition. Clods of earth had to be thrown to drive several into the open. Twelve hours before the fight the bulls are separated and shut up in small rooms without enough space for exercise, and without food and water. Then when the time arrives the first bull is sent into the ring, always with the sun in his eyes, and for the first time in his life he finds himself alone and becomes nervous and afraid.

Great crowds at the booking office were clamoring for the cheaper seats early in the day and at 2.50 not one of the 14,000 seats was for sale. All concerned in the actual fight drove to the ring in open carriages, and many made their way to the little chapel at the ringside to kneel at the altar before entering the ring.

When the entry of the president and the various other ceremonial preliminaries were concluded a bugle call rang out, and the door of the building opened and the first bull bounded into the ring. He stopped short at the entrance, blinded by the brilliant light. Then looking around he picked out an object and with a fierce bellow and head down made his first charge.

There never was fiercer work than Gallo did with his second bull. Time after time the bull charged, and with one moving his feet, but with a bend of his body he guided the bull past. Sometimes he would do this kneeling, while again he would pat the bull as he charged past.

When the signal came to kill, the matador took his sword and, having worked the bull into position and taken careful aim, waited for the charge. With unerring precision the matador lunged and the bull sank to the ground dead.

VICTIM OF PRIDE-MADNESS

Dublin Jury Finds Her Incapable of Managing Her Affairs

Dublin, Ireland.—The mental condition of a haughty baroness was inquired into by the registrar in lunacy and jury in Dublin. The lady is Baroness Gousaunge, who is not present in an asylum at Nice.

Counsel explained that the baroness was born in Ireland, and in 1882 married Baron von Sternberg, a Russian by whom she had two children, a daughter being now in an asylum. In 1893 the baroness was declared to be of unsound mind, and was kept under the care of the lord chancellor until 1900, when she went abroad and married her second husband, who also predeceased her.

The baroness had a peculiar form of mental trouble. She had a haughty disposition, and thought no one fit to associate with her. The doctor in the asylum at Nice testified that she was suffering from intense agitation, refused to be washed and resisted to go to bed.

She had pride-madness or delusion of grandeur. She thought the waiter was trying to poison her. She had bombarded her solicitor with telegrams, seven arriving in eight days, and thought he and her son were misusing her money.

Baron Sternberg, a son, gave evidence, and the jury found that the baroness was of unsound mind, and incapable of managing herself or her affairs.

REAL DUEL ON STAGE

He and the Barytone Horrify Audience by Fierce and Unexpected Conflict

Paris, France.—The Journal publishes a Madrid telegram reporting an extraordinary and tragic affair which, it is said, occurred recently at the theatre at Argamasilla de Alba, in the province of Ciudad Real.

It appears that the leading baritone Senor Pardo, and the chief tenor, Senor Martinez, attached to the operatic company at present performing in the town, were deadly enemies as a consequence of rivalry in a love affair, and they had agreed to fight a duel to death.

They had, however, decided to await the termination of the operatic season in the little town in order that their rivalry might not interrupt the performance.

The season terminated with a performance of "Carmen," and at the close of the third act the spectators were horrified to find themselves the witnesses of a fierce duel between the two singers.

The fight did not last long, the tenor, Martinez, falling dead at the feet of his rival.

Horrid Man

There! said the young wife proudly, as she deposited the hot plate carefully on the table. That's the first pie that I ever made without any help; all alone myself.

So it is! exclaimed her husband enthusiastically, looking it over critically meanwhile. And as long as it is the very first, my dear, don't you think that, instead of cutting it, it would be nice to keep it for a souvenir?—How would it do to have it framed?

SOLDIER HOUSEMAIDS

Vienna News:aper Tells What Officer's Servant Should be

Vienna.—The Vienna Arbeiter Zeitung says that a new service manual for householders who act as servants to officers has just been issued, written by one who has had long years of experience. It is laid down that a soldier-servant must know a housemaid's duties thoroughly and also have a complete knowledge of valeting. He must know how to wait at table, and be an expert at opening champagne bottles. He should also have practice in washing cars and cleaning out stables, etc. These are his duties in times of peace.

When on campaign or at maneuver time he must, on arriving at a strange place, immediately forage for suitable furniture for the officers' quarters. He should then close the windows and kill all the mosquitoes, flies and other vermin, and scatter insect powder on the floor. Such, says the Arbeiter Zeitung, are the duties of the brave defenders of our hearths and homes.

CARE OF THE EWES AT LAMBING TIME

The busiest time in the whole year for the sheep raiser is when the lambs are being dropped, along in the latter part of the winter. The actual profits of the whole year's sheep raising are really being made at this time, and the shepherd is forced to work about twenty-four hours out of every twenty-four for a week or two.

During February and March, and sometimes during the last days of January, the good shepherd finds that practically every hour of his time is being taken up by the lambing ewes. Lantern in hand, he must visit the sheep once or twice during the night. When they are being allowed to run in the open his task is two and three times as difficult as when the sheep are being corralled in sheds and pens every night.

A Minnesota correspondent of American Agriculturist says he finds Shropshires good, hardy sheep, easily wintered. Storms and cold do not affect them as much as some breeds. They also make very good mothers. Last spring he raised 135 lambs from eighty-five ewes. The best time for lambs to come on the average farm is the 1st of May, as the ewes are usually on grass and have lots of milk at that time. The Shropshire wether shown was grand champion at the Chicago International Live Stock exposition of 1912. He was bred by J. and D. J. Campbell, Woodville, Ont.

In order that help and care may be given every ewe and lamb that may need it, try to visit every sheep in the flock about three or four times daily. During the day, if she sheep happen to be on pasture, constant watching is necessary, as the ewes are likely to drop their lambs in some remote part of the pasture.

Early in the winter months in which the lambs are to be expected it is wise to set apart as much of the sheep sheds and shelters as can possibly be spared and divide them off into temporary pens. These should be used for the ewes immediately after they have dropped their lambs. Last year I took a space four feet wide along the east wall of a long sheep shed and fenced it off from the rest of the interior, says a Kentucky shepherd in Farm Progress. By dividing this long space into little pens five feet long I made room for a dozen ewes and their lambs.

A space 4 by 5 is plenty big enough to hold a mother and her lamb comfortably for a night and a day. When a ewe and lamb are brought in I put them in these pens for the night. A little feed for the mother and a bucket of water to help allay her feverish thirst are all the attention she will need for the next twenty-four hours.

When the weather is raw and bad leave them in the pens longer than when the ground is firm and the sun is out. A cold rain on the tender skin of a young lamb is about the worst thing that can happen to him.

The Care of a Churn.

There is a great difference in the appearance of churns after they have been used a while. Some get dark colored and lose their fresh, clean look. Moreover, there is often more or less of a mildewed appearance, owing, it is supposed, to the fact that a much used churn never has a chance to become thoroughly dried out. Neglect to keep it scrupulously clean is fatal to any wooden utensil, since it will quickly absorb odors, and once permeated it is next to impossible to overcome the condition entirely. All the inside of a churn should be regularly treated to a good scalding with boiling water. There is no necessity of so treating the varnished outer surface, which if wiped off with a cloth wrung out of cold water will preserve its pristine freshness indefinitely. A stiff brush is better than a cloth to use in cleansing dairy utensils.

Care of Dairy Utensils.

Flush the separator with plenty of good cold water immediately after use. Take the bowl apart and wash with warm water and washing powder until all parts are cleaned. Then rinse thoroughly with scalding hot water and place them in the clean milk supply tank to drain. Rinse all the dippers, cans, strainers and pails with cold water, then wash them thoroughly with hot water, washing powder and a brush until all traces of milk are removed. Rinse with thoroughly hot water. Never wipe them off with a cloth, as they do not need it, but incline on a clean shelf or over a trough so that the water can drain off readily.

Shoes For Flat Feet.

Flat feet in horses are often caused by allowing the shoes to remain on too long. A shoe for a flat footed horse should be wide in the web and conformed well so as not to touch the sole of the foot. Put a good piece of sole leather beneath the shoe and apply some good horse ointment.

FABULOUS TABLE ANIMALS.

Such as Welsh Rabbit, Scotch Woodcock and Mock Crab.

When one comes to think of it, it is surprising how many fabulous animals come regularly to the dinner table or supper table.

Among them, of course, the most familiar is the Welsh rabbit, which is its original form was merely toasted cheese. Some folks declare that the name is a corruption of "rarebit" but this has never been proved.

Then there is the golden buck, which is a Welsh rabbit with a poached egg on top. Chinese rabbit is a Welsh rabbit with rice in it, and a Mexican rabbit (otherwise known as a Spanish rabbit) contains tomatoes and onions.

So much for rabbits. But how many people are familiar with the Cape Cod turkey? Plenty in New England, where codfish goes under that name.

Scotch woodcock is two slices of hot buttered toast, with an anchovy on each slice and a sauce made of half a pint of milk and the yolks of three eggs poured over them.

Less familiar perhaps is English monkey, which is made by soaking a cupful of breadcrumbs in a cupful of milk and adding a tablespoonful of melted butter, a beaten egg and half a cupful of grated cheese, the whole, with salt and pepper added, being poured over toasted crackers.

The mock turtle is one of the most fabulous of fabulous table animals, being served in the form of soup. In "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland" will be found a striking picture of this remarkable reptile, represented with the body of a turtle and the head of a calf.

Mock duck is a roll of chopped meat and breadcrumbs baked. Mock crab is made by mixing equal parts of grated cheese and butter, seasoning with salt, pepper and vinegar and adding a few drops of anchovy sauce. The paste thus prepared is spread on slices of dry toast or sometimes served in crab shells.

Last, but not least remarkable, of these mythological animals, known only to the kitchen naturalist, is the corn oyster, which is a small fritter of green corn fried like a real oyster.—New York American.

GOLD NUGGETS.

There is a Curious Resemblance Between Them and Meteorites.

How do nuggets of gold originate? Sometimes a mass of the precious metal worth a thousand dollars or more is found. By what process was so much gold compacted into a lump?

An attempt was made not long ago to answer this question. An investigator in Australia cut and sliced and polished gold nuggets with the sole purpose of finding out just what is their structure. The first thing he discovered was that there is one curious point of resemblance between gold nuggets and meteorites. Both, when polished and etched with chlorine water, exhibit a crystalline structure. In the case of meteorites the lines thus exhibited on the etched surface are called Widmannstättian figures, and their presence is said to be one of the most invariable characteristics of those metallic bodies that fall from the sky to the earth.

But it is not meant to be implied that gold nuggets have fallen from the sky because they exhibit a crystalline structure recalling that of meteorites. The resemblance is apparently only superficial, and the crystals of the nuggets differ in form from those of the meteorites.

Another curious fact is that when a nugget is heated in a Bunsen flame explosions take place on its surface. Bubbles are formed which continue to swell until they burst with a sharp report and bits of gold are violently scattered about. It is evident that the nuggets contain either gases or some liquids or solids which are easily converted into the gaseous form, the expansion of which produces the explosions.—Harper's Weekly.

Fake Curies.

Dr. Winkling, the Egyptologist, tells us that it is useless to warn the tourist against the fake curio. He buys and is sold with an unfailing regularity, and hardly any imitation is too gross to deceive him. Dr. Winkling tells us of a lady who bought a scarab from a boy who assured her that it had himself stolen it from the excavations in the temple of Aknaton. And she displayed her treasure triumphantly and always with the words, "And I am sure it must be true, for he had such an honest little face"—Argonaut.

No Use For the Doctor.

"Why did you send the doctor away without permitting him to do anything for you?"

"He said he could get me up and out in three days," the sufferer groaned, "and my accident insurance amounts to $30 a week more than my salary as long as I'm disabled."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Pessimistic Thought.

Every rose has its thorn. And the mean part of it is that the thorn stays on the job when the rose has withered.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Folly often goes beyond her bounds but impudence knows none.—Ben Jonson.

HORSE WISDOM.

Weeks before field work is possible every young horse intended for service next spring should be broken to a dependable quantity.

Except in unusual cases of rush work the teams should cease work in time to cool off before the dampness and falling temperature of evening.

The buyers demand style in drafters as well as weight.

Farm horses that are not to be used through the winter should have a roomy paddock in which to exercise every fair day.

One of the most important things is to teach the colt to walk fast from the very start. Never hitch him up with a slow, unresponsive horse.

When you begin to handle the colts keep it up every day.

BROOD MARE TREATMENT.

Precautions to Observe to Prevent Loss of Foal by Abortion.

More consideration than is the general rule should be given to the treatment of brood mares, writes J. A. MacDonald in Rural New Yorker. As soon as it is known that a mare is safely in foal care should be exercised that she receives no treatment or annoyance that would endanger the loss of the foal through abortion. Sometimes the teasing or annoyance by a stallion or a gelding will cause such trouble. While with foal foods that are of a laxative and distinctly nutritive character should be used. Besides, something more than the ordinary amount of grain should be given, so that the mare's strength is not reduced while supporting the unborn foal. Oats should be the chief and staple article used for grain food, and the mare should have a fair allowance at least twice a day during the winter months.

Along with oats, bran should be freely and regularly used by every farmer who raises horses. Clover hay is preferable to timothy if free from dust. In addition to these, a few roots should be fed daily or every second day at least. If, however, wheat bran is fed liberally roots are not so necessary, because bran is laxative and cooling to the blood, which is the very effect of roots. Raw potatoes are good and very cooling. Not many should be fed in the raw state. I know one man who kept two horses. One was a pretty big horse and the other was a small horse. Raw potatoes were fed every night to these horses, to the big horse sixteen and to the small one twelve. This was a fair proportion.

Brood mares should be kept sharply shod in winter, as a struggle to keep their feet on ice or slippery roads may cause abortion. Cold, icy water is dangerous, as it may cause colic and eventually abortion. Mares in foal, while better for being worked moderately, should be kept out of deep snow. Plunging and struggling in deep snow are very dangerous.

When there is imminent danger of the mare aborting through slipping on ice, plunging in deep snow, hard driving or otherwise, soft feed should be withheld and the mare given kila dried grain. Whole wheat dried in the oven of the kitchen stove is an old established preventive feed. It has long been a practice with us to feed this dried wheat to the mare after a hard drive or at any time that abortion is apprehended. While I have known our mares to abort several times, I never knew any of them to abort after getting preventive feeds of dried wheat. If wheat is not at hand, dried barley is good, or even dried oats.

With care and the exercise of common sense there should be little danger of a mare with foal doing all kinds of work and even driving if she is a general purpose mare.

Tankage For Hogs.

I have fed tankage to hogs of all ages for the last thirteen years with the best results in every case, says John H. Dunlap in Country Gentleman.

It is an ideal feed to use with corn and is highly palatable. It need not be fed in large quantities, one part of tankage to ten parts of corn being a very satisfactory ration. Nothing is better than a warm slop for hogs of all ages during the winter months. It is hard to get them to drink all the water that their systems require during the winter, and if they are given all the warm slop they will drink they will do much better than without it. Though personally I like to feed tankage in slop better than to feed it dry, it may be fed on the ground during the summer months in small quantities, with salt and any other condiments, with good results.

The Profitable Cow.

The cow giving the most butter fat leaves the owner with the most net cash profit without regard to cost of keeping when compared with low producing cows on small keeping costs. This phase of dairy economics is difficult to comprehend by many cow owners. Experiment time and again, however, has proved the assertion. The large producing cow does not consume feed as compared with the small producing cow in the same proportion that the small producing cow does.—Kansas Farmer.

At Farrowing Time.

Out out the corn at farrowing time and feed alfalfa or some other nitrogenous feed. For a few weeks before and after farrowing the sow would be better off without corn. She needs more nitrogenous feeds until the pigs are weaned.

COMBINED TEXTURES.

This Mode Offers Unlimited Opportunities For Remodeling Gowns.

There is one feature of summer frocks that one can depend upon to materialize—that of the use of combination of two or more fabrics of contrasting texture and color for a suit or dress. It is not a new idea, for last spring the foreign designers attempted to introduce it, but somehow it did not catch on at that time.

There are three really new ideas which have been exploited this season in this scheme of combining fabrics.

ONE OF THE ECCENTRIC DRAPINGS OF FASHION.

One calls for a combination of two materials, a plain and a figured, both in the same color; another for the combination of different materials in contrasting colors. Such a laxity in modes offered the woman with a limited income, who is depending upon the skill of her needlewoman, many opportunities for remodeling old costumes.

The dress pictured will give a hint in this direction to the clever seamstress. It is made of white cotton crepe and pale yellow zigzag cloth. The drapery, lifted at the back, is extremely Parisian.

CARE AND USE OF SOAP.

Buy in Large Quantities, as This Commodity Improves With Age.

As water alone cannot render grease soluble, it is impossible to cleanse most clothes without the aid of an agent which is capable of so doing.

The cleaning and solvency properties of soap are entirely due to the alkaline constituents, the fatty acids being employed only to modify the injurious property of alkali.

When buying soap it is desirable to procure that made by a well known, reliable manufacturer, as one is less likely to get an inferior article. It is also better to buy it in large quantities, as large quantities are usually sold at a considerable reduction in price, and soap improves in quality and durability by keeping.

Soap may be used as a solid, or it may be dissolved and used as a liquid. In whatever form its action is that of a grease solvent and purifying agent. It is used in the solid or hard state for strong material without color, when its strength may be concentrated by rubbing it on the particularly dirty parts, so that they may be more easily and thoroughly cleansed.

Soap powder is principally composed of soda and water, and as washing soda does not cost more than one-fifth the price of soap powder, it would be more economical for the housekeeper to use that substance with the addition of a little soap solution to the water, which would form a lather equally as well, and the work of cleansing would be as effectual as when soap powder is used.

Magic Cleaning Fluid.

For cleaning delicate fabrics this method is said not to fade or injure the finest color: Grate raw potatoes to a pulp, add one pint of water to one pound of the potato pulp, stir and wash between the hands, then drain the water from the pulp through a fine sieve or cloth. Let it stand in the vessel until the fine white starch settles to the bottom, then pour off the clear water, which is what you use for cleaning. The settlings are used for potato starch for stiffening fine materials. For cleaning, sponge with the liquid, applying until all soil is removed, rinse in clear water and iron on the wrong side. For white silk, which may be passed through the water as through soda, add a very little borax to the water. Party dresses and white cashmeres clean beautifully by this method.

Odorless Lard.

To take away the odor of pork from lard buy leaf lard and while melting put several apples with the skins on, well washed and dried, into the melting pot. It gives the lard a fine flavor, and it can be used instead of butter in almost any pastry.

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS.

Olive and Elaine Dickens, granddaughters of the novelist, have recently had a play produced in London. "Beauty and the Beast" is its title.

Miss Dora Keen of Philadelphia, the mountain climber, is a slight little woman of much personal charm, about the last one would pick in a crowd as the conqueror of Mount Blackburn, one of the highest peaks in Alaska.

Miss Josephine Freund, agent for the Southern Pacific Railroad company at Dilley, Ore., has for the third time in six years received the medal for perfect work. In 1907 she received the gold medal for the Oregon lines.

Miss Inez Milholland of New York is one of the best looking suffragists in the entire army under the yellow flag of votes for women. She brings to the cause a diploma from Vassar college and a license to practice law at Albitum in the state of New York.

Miss Katherine I. Harrison, whom the Pujo committee was anxious to summon recently in the hope that she might reveal some of her vast knowledge of Standard Oil secrets, was for twenty-five years private secretary to the late H. H. Rogers and is said to have accumulated more than a million dollars as a result of her rare business ability, coupled with her knowledge of inside affairs.

Sporting Notes.

John J. McGraw has signed a new contract for five years with the New York National league club. The terms are said to be $20,000 a year.

Negotiations are pending for an international contest of 1,500 points at 182 ball line billiards between William F. Hoppe, the champion, and Firmin Cassagnol, conceded to be the best billiardist of the present day in France.

Howard Jones, Yale 1908, Sheffield, has been appointed head coach of the Yale football team for the year 1913. His appointment marks an important epoch in the Blues' football history. He will be the first salaried football coach for Yale. For years Yale has adhered to the graduate coaching system, with Walter Camp as chief adviser.

German Gleanings.

That instruction in domestic science be made compulsory for girls' schools is urged in a petition signed by a large number of women in Berlin.

The German army comprises a total of 655,012 men. Of the 27,037 officers 413 are generals, 695 colonels and 2,367 officers of the hospital corps. There are 531,004 privates.

Berlin has just opened a new hotel with a roof garden restaurant, the first of its kind in Germany. It will command a splendid view on summer nights of the famous Berlin zoo and the brilliantly illuminated environment. The hotel represents an investment of $2,500,000.

CHOICE BUTTER MADE ON THE FARM

E. E. Rockwood in Hoard's Dairyman says of farm buttermaking: I was talking recently with a farmer's wife who makes butter for a private line of customers, delivering it every two weeks.

The process of making-choice butter is thoroughly understood by this woman. The quality is ever the same. The color never varies, nor does the salting. Everything about it from start to finish is done by rule. She has a separator run by a gasoline engine. The men separate the milk as they bring it from the barn. The cream is cooled at once and not mixed with that previously separated while it is warm. Churning is done every other day, or three times each week. A barrel churn, with no inside paddles whatever, is used. The cream is ripened by setting it in a warm place, adding a little buttermilk left from the last churning and stirring well. It is considered sufficiently ripened when it "bits" or when a spoon dipped into it is well coated on removal. Such cream pours out like thick molasses. It is strained through a sieve into the churn.

The amount of butter color is gauged according to the amount of cream. A rich tint is secured to the finished product, yet not so high a color as to offend the eye. Salt is sifted and used at the rate of an ounce and a half to the pound. The tastes of the consumers seem to agree on this amount, which is not too much after the butter is worked.

The remarkable vitality and milk producing qualities of the Brown Swiss breed of dairy cattle are indicated by the performance of Oia B., a two-year-old heifer. Handicapped with a broken shoulder, she made an official record with her first calf of 9,097 pounds of milk containing 22.15 pounds of butter fat in ten months. Oia B., which is shown with calf, is owned by the Wainhalla farms, Middleburg, N. Y.

The winter churning temperature is right around 62 degrees. The cows are Jersey grades and produce a heat resisting quality of fat. Sometimes 64 degrees brings the butter of equally firm texture. When the globules reach the size of kernels of wheat a part of the buttermilk is drawn away and as much water of the same temperature is put into the churn. This is given a few turns and the cork again removed. This time the butter is drained pretty well and then washed with a pail of water at 62 degrees. I should have said that a handful of salt is added to the first water. This assists in separating the globules from the milk and floats them freely on the top. A hair sieve over a pail catches whatever particles run through. Sometimes another pail of water is needed to sufficiently wash out the milk, but all water used is in cold weather tempered to 62 or 64 degrees so as to leave the butter just right to work. Salt is sifted over the granules in the churn and the whole partly worked by revolving the churn. It is finished with a bowl and ladle, all this work being completed and the butter packed in small earthen crocks before it hardens. In summer it is usually set away for several hours after the first working and then reworked to finish the job. This is done because of different temperature conditions existing between the two seasons.

Fattening Sheep With Silage.

Accurate data regarding the value of silage in a ration for fattening sheep and lambs is scarce, but what there is indicates that it is useful. As far back as the early nineties the Michigan experiment station fed some lambs on silage and other foodstuffs. The gist of their findings is to the effect that a mixture of fodders composed largely of a good quality of silage proved a cheap and successful ration for fattening lambs. The Iowa station at Ames made some comparative tests of dry hay roots and silage as roughage for two years. The average of the two years was favorable to the use of silage as a means of cheapening the ration. The lambs from all lots finished into market toppers, but the dressed carcasses showed the silage lambs a little superior on the hook.

Care Makes the Cow.

Breeding in the dairy animal amounts to little or nothing unless the animal is so fed as to develop the cow and so obtain the results of her superior breeding. On the other hand, many calves of scrub breeding, properly reared and fed, will develop into profitable milk producers. The chances, of course, are always in favor of the heifer calf of good dairy breeding being a good milker.

Live Stock on the Farm.

Animal husbandry means more meat for the farmer's table, a cheap and desirable method of marketing farm products and more manure for the soil. Get animals and raise plenty of grain, hay and grazing for them.

Empire Day

According to a despatch from London, Empire Day is mixed up in the minds of the British war office authorities, at least, with Victoria Day. Empire Day is essentially a school day and was suggested by a patriotic Ontario lady some years ago. It is always observed on May 23, and, through the efforts of the League of the Empire, whose headquarters are in the empire's heart, London, the day is observed in all the far-flung realms over which the Union Jack flies. The great English cities have for some years carried out splendid programs on Empire day, many thousands of children participating in great open-air demonstrations. In the great overseas Dominions, too, the day is honored in north, south, east and west of our world-wide empire. Not in a spirit of blatant jingoism, but rather "lest we forget."

Empire Day is not planned to inspire boastfulness and pride of race, but rather in the spirit breathed by the poet Watson in speaking of the Motherland and our sea-girt empire.

She stands, a thousand-wintered tree,
By countless moors impearled;
Her broad roots coil beneath the sea,
Her branches sweep the world;
Her seeds, by careless winds conveyed
Clothe the remotest strand
With forests from her scatterings made.
New nations fostered in her shade,
And linking land with land.

O ye by wandering tempest sown
Scath every alien star,
Forget not whence the breath was blown
That wafted you afar!
For ye are still her ancient seed
On younger soil let fall—
Children of Britain's island-breed
To whom the mother in her need
Perchance one day may call.

Millions Lost Through Raising Wheat

It costs $1.04 1/2 to produce the average bushel of wheat according to Dr. J. H. Worst, president of the agricultural college of North Dakota.
He says that the farmers are mining the soil and robbing future generations every time they grow wheat and that they are producing a crop at a real cash loss every year.

"According to the best authorities," says Dr. Worst, "one acre producing 20 bushels of wheat mines from the soil 44 pounds of potash worth 5 cents a pound or $2.20; 20 pounds of phosphoric acid at 4 cents or 80 cents and 42 pounds of nitrogen at 15 cents or $6.30; a total of $9.30 an acre or 46 1/2 cents worth of soil fertility for every bushel raised.
The U. S. Department of Agriculture says that labor and other production cost, interest on investment cost of marketing, depreciation, etc., amounts to 58c. a bushel for all wheat raised in the United States.
This brings the actual cost of a bushel of wheat, including the commercial value of the constituents removed from the soil up to $1.04 1/2."

Since the average price received for wheat is much less than this sum Dr. Worst estimates that the loss to the farmers of this country runs into the hundreds of millions on their wheat crop. The loss in North Dakota through the fertility alone that was removed by the wheat last year says Dr. Worst will amount to over $70,000,000. Dr. Worst is vice-president of the International Dry-Farming Congress. His figures are so startling in their indication that the future of the American farmer must depend largely upon feeding crops and on the return of the manure to the soil that a discussion of the subject will be made a special order of business at the annual meeting of the Congress in Tulsa, Oklahoma, next October.

Everything depends on the crops.
If Alberta gets a good crop this year business will be good for everyone and the prospects are most encouraging. It does not pay to be ever in doubt and worrying. A couple of weeks ago some complained of too much dry, warm weather and last week complained of too much clamp, cool weather. Now, would it be better to wait and see just the good things kind providence is working out?

Money Tightness and Mental Suggestion

Mental suggestion and its effect in making money tighter, is the interesting subject that is now exercising the mind of Louis Davis, formerly a London newspaper man and civic official, but now a business man of Toronto. Mr. Davis has just returned from a trip through the west in which he resumed his newspaper duties for the London Financial News and the Daily Telegraph. He says the financial situation is improved, but is never-the-less worse than it ought to be owing to "mental suggestion." His idea is that business men begin to talk tight money, a sort of hypnosis fastens on the public, which has the effect of increasing tightness. Let twenty of your friends tell you you are looking wretched at a time when you are perfectly well," he said, "and it won't be long before you will be really ill. Well, it's just like that with the financial health of a nation. One man says "Money's tight." His hearer accepts the suggestion—in the jargon of the mental therapists—and passes it on, and soon you have a stringency produced largely by purely mental means.

Mr. Davis's "mental suggestion" might well be considered seriously by many people. When a person enters a store with the purpose of purchasing a number of articles, knowing the clerk or manager, after passing on the weather question, he is more than likely to ask how business is going. If the clerk or manager says nicely "we are kept very busy," he will almost invariably give his order quickly and fully, but if he is informed money is tight, and business quiet he is more than apt to take his time and cut his list to the smallest margin, after which he goes home to his neighbors to tell them all business is very quiet and money very tight, advises them to hold on to every dollar.

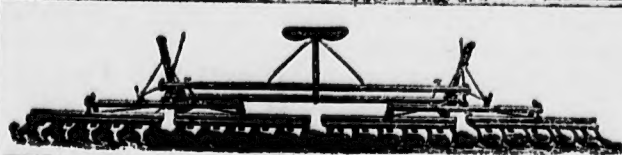

Gleichen Should Be Represented at the Calgary Exhibition

If this section of the west is to be represented at the Calgary exhibition by a district exhibit it is time that steps were being taken in that direction. The amount of advertising which Gleichen would obtain by such a display, which would be seen by the tens of thousands who will visit Calgary in July taking their annual holiday will be incalculable. There are three prizes of $200, $150 and $100 for the district exhibits, and $75 will be given to each exhibit, apart from prize winner.

Farmers will be interested in the acre yield competition for which there are prizes aggregating $1000 for spring and winter wheat, oats, barley and flax. There are six prizes in each ranging from $100 down and the competition is open to the world. With the handsome prizes offered those who attend the fair will assuredly see some of the best grain grown on the continent and in the different competitions there are entries from south of the line as well as the western provinces. As a whole the prize list offers many opportunities to the successful farmer and stockman.

An Edmonton despatch says: That there are undoubtedly large numbers of men possessing a mere smattering of medical knowledge, but who are not qualified to act as doctors, practicing in the province of Alberta is the opinion of Dr. J. S. Wright, president of the Edmonton Medical association. The association has received from the Trades and Labor Council a letter in regard to the death of the wife of one of their members, who was attended by an unregistered practitioner. "It is hard to deal with such cases," said Dr. Wright, "but it is of the utmost importance where people's lives are at stake that everything possible should be done to protect the public from unqualified men." In the case brought up to the association it was impossible to take action, as the man was not a member of the association, and was not registered in the province. The association have advised the labor council to take the matter up with the attorney-general's department.

A social evening will be held in the Methodist Church on June 4th, at 8 p.m. A good time may be expected as well as a treat for the inner man. Particulars later.

AUTOMOBILES

With the advent of 1913 many new cars are noted on the Canadian markets. Both new and old show many refinements and improvements over 1912.

McLAUGHLIN-BUICK builders have made good their claim to a country built car.

A car built for our none-to-good Canadian roads.

A car fitted with all the latest improvements.

The prices are moderate. Careful comparison is invited with the higher priced cars and especially with cheap cars whose makers base their extravagant claims of present worth on what their cars have not, instead of what they have.

We also have some excellent values in rebuilt cars repainted and overhauled.

"No, drop it," said Green hoarsely. "Let me first, I did—but as for you, you drop it."

Well, declared Monday in deep disgust at this strange lack of a proper pride in an affair that had occupied many columns of the papers; well, I thought every gentleman naturally liked a little conversation about his own little affairs.

Tastes differ, you see, said Durand; this way, and he led them down the stairs into the kitchen, where a tall thin woman with a flat chest and long bony limbs, who seemed almost disgraced by a pronounced squint, was busy doing some cooking. "Bill, what time is it?" she asked, looking at a clock on the wall.

"Hullo, my dear!" cried Durand, give us something to eat, will you, my charmer? Wake up Sneezer, he added, giving the sleeper a shake which elicited only a muffled grunt.

You leave my man alone, Mr. Durand, grumbled Mrs. Crookes, he needs a lot of sleep by constitution, he does, bless him.

Bless him, indeed, said Durand, well, wake up your own dear Ebenezer—only look sharp for Billy Man may be here any minute.

What have we come down here for? asked Monday discontentedly, why couldn't we sit in the drawing-room like gentlemen? For my part, I have inherited aristocratic tastes that make places like kitchens quite distasteful to me.

Then get rid of them, Durand advised him; get rid of them.

Ah, but I'm proud of my aristocratic tastes, returned Monday with an immense complacency, besides, if we were in the drawing-room we could have Miss Joan along with us too.

Oh, said Durand, we want to talk business she must know nothing about.

She'll have to know some day, grumbled Monday, when we're married. And when shall we be married, Dave Durand? You've promised her to me long enough, so you have.

Durand's evil smile came and played upon his countenance, making it ten times more evil than before.

Patience, patience, he said smoothly, a maiden's tender love must not be forced, you know and you must have patience my good friend, before I can call you my dear, son—why, what's the matter, Green?

You don't mean, gasped out Green excitedly, as 'er's to marry 'im? Your remark is a trifle confused—too many pronouns, don't you think? But if you mean to ask if Sid Monday desires to marry my daughter Joan, he does.

And she? asked Green, still in the same excited tones; and she—what does she say?

Ah, she does not know, smiled Durand, and Monday smirked and pulled his collar and straightened his tie; it is a pleasant surprise we are receiving for her, Green again and then seemed to fall into an amazed silence.

You had better have a care of her, grumbled Mrs. Crookes, who by now had succeeded in arousing her slumberous spouse; she'll be giving the whole show away one of these days. If I was you I'd put her through it, so I would, or pack her off somewhere with her ma where we should never see neither of 'em no more. They'll be the ruin of us yet, you mark my words.

Ah, but she can be made useful, retorted Durand, and then turned round quickly on Green whose features still showed his amazement and disgust.

PIMPLES ITCHED AND BURNED

On Arms and Legs. Caused Running Sores. Would Tear Himself Till They Bled. Like Open Wounds. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

53 Stewart St., Toronto, Ontario.—

"When my baby was nine months old he had a lot of pimples come on his arms and legs which used to come to a head, then break and cause running sores. They were bright red spots, which itched and burned so badly that he would tear himself till he made them bleed and they were all like open wounds. They were on his face and arms so bad that I did not like to take him out. He could not sleep or rest anywhere. I tried several things at home and lots of different things people used to advise me, but he did not get a bit better.

"I bathed each place in warm water and Cuticura Soap and then I put some of the Cuticura Ointment on and bound them up in soft rags and he slept better that night than he had for three weeks, and he did not scratch himself once that night. I did that for three days, night and morning, when we noticed the sores were getting drier and healing, so I bought a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment, and after a week and a few days there was not a blemish on him." (Signed) Mrs. F. West, Feb. 29, 1912.

Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. For a liberal free sample of each, with 32-p. book, send post card to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. 39D, Boston, U. S. A.

And what are you interested in her for? he demanded; do you want to marry her yourself?

Me? stammered Green in tones of such unaffected bewilderment that even Monday, who had been sitting silent in rising anger became satisfied. Me marry 'er! Me! lor, no.

How fortunate, smiled Durand, my dear Sid, I was almost afraid you were going to have a dangerous rival; I was, upon my word.

Look 'ere, said Green, don't you go poking fun at me—or 'er—so there.

I'm sure I apologise, smiled Durand, but now friend Sneezer is awake let us get to business, and first of all about Lady Martin's little affair. The ball is coming off so soon, there is no time to lose, and Billy Man is too uncertain for us to depend on.

They became engaged in deep discussion while Mrs. Crookes put on the table a meal of which they partook heartily. Then one by one they slipped away first Monday and then Durand, who was evidently the leader among them, and last Sneezer, till all were gone except Mrs. Crookes and Green, who was to take up his position as footman at once.

You had better take 'em up their tea, I suppose, Mrs. Crookes observed to him in a very sulky and grudging tone after some time had elapsed; we have to wait on 'em now, but in a bit—in a bit—

She prepared a tray with much grumbling, and Green, awkwardly enough, for he was not used to such domestic employment, carried it into the drawing room. He had one or two such journeys to make, and when he returned the second time, it was evident he was in a very bad temper. She never so much as looked at me, he grumbled; one would have thought I wasn't there—never so much as looked at me, she didn't, he repeated with vast indignation.

Ah, she's a proud 'un, said Mrs. Crookes viciously; a real 'roud 'un; but in a bit—in a bit—

And ain't she got a right to be proud? he retorted unexpectedly; she has got something to be proud of, ain't she? And that, he added moodily, is more nor you and me can say, or most other folks as I ever met.

He sat down sulkily in a corner of the kitchen, while in the drawing-room above the two ladies took their tea in a silence almost unbroken. It was not that Mrs. Durand was disinclined to chatter—she was never that—but Joan's face had on it an expression her mother knew well, and that meant that she was thinking deeply.

But at last she spoke, looking up abruptly.

Mother, she said, do you know where that magazine is I showed you—the one with the portrait of Wilton Mayne, the poet, in it?

Dear me, Joan, how you startle me when you speak in that sudden way, said Mrs. Durand, pressing her hand to her heart. It's on the table just behind you I think.

I'm sorry, darling, said Joan penitently, and picking up the magazine she turned slowly to the portrait of Wilton Mayne, which she examined with great care.

I wonder, Mrs. Durand babbled on, feeling herself at liberty to talk now Joan had broken the silence. I wonder what the neighbors will think of our footman? Dear me, I'm sure it's very good of David. Only it's such a surprise; but I suppose when a man occupies such an important post as David does in the Secret Political Service of the Government, he is more or less bound to be mysterious.

Joan made no answer, but bent still lower over the portrait she was examining with such detailed and singular care. But after all, her mother believed that tale about the Government Secret Service, so much the better. Joan knew that her own doubts had hardened now into something approaching certainties. Her memory began to return to the past. She had never loved her father, she had always dreaded him, but it was only during the last year or two that such dark and terrible fears had invaded her heart. She remembered well, when on one of his brief visits to them some three or four years before, he had seemed so much astonished at finding that the bolsterous school-girl in short frocks had turned into a stately and beautiful young woman.

She remembered how, following his surprise, there had come upon his face that hateful smile she had learned to dread so utterly since then.

But through it all she had shielded and guarded her mother as such as possible, and for her part Mrs. Durand seemed to accept her husband's offered explanation of his strange comings and goings and the strange associates he had, that he was in the Secret Service of the Government.

And I don't believe you've heard a word of all that I've been saying, Joan, complained Mrs. Durand pettishly; you seem a great deal interested in that portrait, she added.

Yes, it interests me, said Joan slowly as she put down the magazine and rose to her feet. Shall you be all right, darling if I go out for a little while?

I suppose I shall have to be, returned Mrs. Durand complainingly, but what is taking you out now, Joan. I will tell you some other time, darling, Joan answered as she left the room to put on her outdoor things. (To be Continued)

A Smart Salesman

Let me see some of your black kid gloves, said a lady to a shop assistant.

These are not the latest style, are they? she asked, when the gloves were produced.

Yes, madam, replied the shopman, we have had them in stock only two days.

I didn't think they were, because the fashion paper says black kids have tan stitches and vice versa. I see the tan stitches but not the vice versa.

The shopman explained that vice versa was French for seven buttons, so she bought three pairs.

Modest

A clerical-looking gentleman, in the hope of obtaining a contribution, entered the office of a newspaper, and, finding the editor, in, began:

I am soliciting aid for a gentleman of refinement and intelligence who is in need of a little ready money but is too proud to make known his sufferings.

Why, exclaimed the editor, I'm the only man in town answering that description. What's the gentleman's name?

I'm sorry to say I am not at liberty to disclose it.

It must be me, parson. Heaven prosper you in your good work, said the editor, wiping away a tear.

NEW PISTOLS FOR PARIS POLICE

New Weapon to Deal With Desperate Criminals Is Successfully Used

Paris, France.—The suffocating revolver was used by the Paris police recently for the first time, and its effectiveness was amply demonstrated. The weapon was invented as a sequel to the motor bandit sieges, when it was realized that there was need for some method of overcoming the resistance of dangerous criminals, without so much risk to the police.

The weapon was used in the Passy quarter, where a young creole named Vitale Pothin, belonging to a wealthy family, had suddenly become mad. Armed with a revolver and several boxes of cartridges he had barricaded himself in his room at a flat, and for several hours had fired at anyone who had ventured approach. A policeman had a narrow escape of being shot.

Steel bucklers were then fitted to a couple of detectives, who crept up to a small window and fired the contents of their suffocating revolvers. The room was filled with acrid smoke, and Pothin, half suffocated, made a dash to the window, where he was captured by the detectives.

Child Eaten by Eagles

Rome.—The Cacciatori Italiani states that a party of hunters have captured two royal eagles, with their young, on the Alps near the Ledro valley. In the eagles' nest were found the bones of a child, as well as the remains of 200 ducks, forty hares, a chamois, a fox and innumerable birds.

DR. TALKS ON FOOL

Pres. of Board of Health.

"What shall I eat?" is the daily inquiry the physician is met with. I do not hesitate to say that in my judgment a large percentage of disease is caused by poorly selected and improperly prepared food. My personal experience with the fully-cooked food known as Grape-Nuts, enables me to speak freely of its merits.

"From overwork, I suffered several years with malnutrition, palpitation of the heart, and loss of sleep. Last summer I was led to experiment personally with the new food, which I used in conjunction with good rich cow's milk. In a short time after I commenced its use, the disagreeable symptoms disappeared, my heart's action became steady and normal, the functions of the stomach were properly carried out and I again slept soundly and as well as in my youth."

"I look upon Grape-Nuts as a perfect food, and no one can gainsay but that it has a most prominent place in a rational, scientific system of feeding. Anyone who uses this food will soon be convinced of the soundness of the principle upon which it is manufactured and may thereby know the facts as to its true worth." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

ROYAL DOCUMENTS IN BOTTLE

List of Valuable Jewels Once Owned by the French Empress Eugenie

Paris, France.—An inventory of jewels that belonged to the Empress Eugenie was discovered recently at Montlouis, in the Pyrenees-Orientales department, by a young soldier who was taking a stroll near the fortifications. He noticed the neck of a bottle sticking out of the ground, and unearthed it. In it was a document bearing the seals of the Second Empire, dated September 4, 1870, and having the inscription: Inventory of Jewels and bank notes entrusted today to M. Manuel Perez to be taken to Madrid and handed over to the Comtesse de Montijo—probably a relation of the Empress. Several items followed:

A pearl necklace presented by the Emperor of Russia value at $100,000. Two pearl bracelets from the Queen of England, valued at $125,000.

A ruby and diamond parure, from the Shah of Persia, valued at $180,000. A pearl and diamond necklace from the Grand Duc Constantine, of Russia, valued at $165,000.

Four parures six bracelets and three necklaces, valued at $320,000.

The document was headed Paris, Palace of the Tuilleries, and signed by the Grand Chamberlain of the Palace.

When the authorities visited the spot where the inventory was discovered, they found part of a human skeleton, which had apparently been there for more than forty years.

Proof Positive

A quack doctor was holding forth about his medicines to a rural audience.

From a voice in the crowd came: That dead men tell no tales.

LET the greatest athlete have dyspepsia and his strength will soon fail. One's stamina—forcefulness and strength of mind or muscle depend upon the blood, and the blood in turn, requires a healthy stomach, for the stomach is the laboratory where the food is digested and such elements are taken up—or assimilated—which make blood. In consequence all the organs of the body, such as heart, lungs, liver and kidneys, as well as the nervous system, feel the bad effect if the stomach is deranged.

Not Tending to Business

A country doctor was recently called upon to visit a patient who resided at a distance. Arriving at his destination he tied his horse to a tree near by, and walked towards the house.

It happened that work was in progress on a new well, of which the doctor knew nothing until he found himself sinking into the earth. He fell just far enough to be unable to get out of the hole unassisted, and yelled lustily for help.

When he was finally pulled up his rescuer remarked: I say, doctor, you had no business down there.

No, I hadn't, replied the doctor. Don't you know, continued his rescuer, you ought to leave the well alone and look after the sick.

WERE TRIED AND STOOD THE TESTDODD'S KIDNEY PILLS MAKING A REPUTATION IN THE WEST

Saskatchewan Man Tells How He Cured Him, After Four Months' Suffering from Backache and Other Forms of Kidney Disease

St. Phillips, Sask. (Special).—In a new country where changes of climate and impure water are among the difficulties to be surmounted, kidney trouble is prevalent. It is the kidneys, the organs that strain the impurities out of the blood, that first feel any undue strain on the body. Consequently Dodd's Kidney Pills have been well tried and tested in this neighborhood.

They have stood the test. Many settlers tell of backache, rheumatism and urinary troubles cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills. Mr. Otto Olshowski is one of these. In speaking of his cure he says:

"I suffered from kidney disease for four months. My back ached, I had heart flutterings, and was always tired and nervous. My skin had a harsh, dry feeling; my limbs were heavy; and I had a dragging sensation across the loins.

"I consulted a doctor, but, as I did not appear to improve, I decided to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I used six boxes, and now I am all right."

Dodd's Kidney Pills always stand the test. Ask your neighbors.

London.—It was stated at the opening of a tuberculosis exhibition at Polar recently that Doctor Alexander, the medical officer of health for Poplar, had suggested that the disused Thames steamboat, should be used as schools for consumptive children.

So you have determined to sue me for breach of promise?

Yes. With damages.

Of course.

Well, say, I've got just one favor to ask of you. Don't sue me for less than $100,000. I haven't got a dollar in the world that I can call my own, and it might hurt my credit.

Two Irishmen, bent on robbery, held up a passing Scotchman. After a long, fierce fight in which the Scotchman almost had the better of it, they succeeded in conquering him. A thorough search of his clothes disclosed one lone five-cent piece.

FINDS TIME TO WRITE PLAYS

Millionaire Author Makes Another Millionaire Famous in Classic History His Hero

Paris, France.—J. Salter Hansen has secured the English and American rights of a play by Baron Henri de Rothschild with the appropriate title of "Croesus." Baron Henri de Rothschild, who is also a practicing doctor, has several well-earned successes to his credit on the Paris stage.

The new play, particularly when its authorship is taken into consideration, is distinctly interesting. Croesus, an immensely rich man, died in the first act of the woman he loves and on whom he showers money, is carrying on an intense life with a poorer man, whose chief merit apparently, is his poverty.

BARON HENRI DE ROTHSCHILD

We find him in the next act transacting business, buying pictures, lending his friends money, and very much disgusted at the general wish to extract money from him.

In the last act, disguised as a poor clerk, Croesus is happy. He is engaged to a Paris midwife, and she believes him to be earning $60 a month. But one of his own friends, with money he has borrowed from Croesus, has dazzled the girl, and she suggests that Croesus should play the part in her life which in the first act was played by the friend of the woman he loved. Croesus cannot be loved for himself alone. His money always stands in the way.

Mr. Hansen says that he and Baron Henri de Rothschild will be in London before long to make final arrangements for the production of the play.

BABY'S OWN TABLETS.

Baby's Own Tablets are the best medicine a mother can give her little one. They act as a gentle laxative, sweeten the stomach, break up colds and make teething easy. Concerning them Mrs. Alphonse Landry, Upper Carleton, N.B., says: "Baby's Own Tablets were of great benefit to my little boy and I would advise all mothers with sickly children to give them a trial." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A Valuable Antique

An old lady was searching in the dim bric-a-brac shop for something odd to take home with her. Finally she noticed a quaint figure, the head and shoulders of which appeared above the counter at the farthest end of the room. She turned to the clerk and said: What's that queer old Japanese idol over there worth?

The clerk answered in a subdued tone: About $250,000, ma'am. That's the proprietor.

An Irishman who was too old for active work was offered the position of crossing tender at a small railroad station. He looked dubious as the duties of the office were explained to him and the meaning of the various flags was clearly stated.

In case of danger with a train coming, of course you wave the red flag, said his friend, proceeding with his explanation.

A hard old hand gripped his arm. Man, dear, it'll never do, said Patrick, shaking his head solemnly. I could never trust myself to remember to wave a red flag when there was a green wan handy.

Sweating System

Swell—Yes, sir, I make all my money by the sweating system—by making the other fellows do the sweating while I rake in the coin.

Friend—I should be ashamed to acknowledge it if I were you.

Swell—Why, then, no harm in being the proprietor of a Turkish bath, is there?

After passing the greater part of the evening with friends, John decided that home was the place for him, and, arriving there, he elected to sleep in the front yard.

Next morning happening to look up, he saw his wife observing him from an open window. Shut that window! he yelled. Do you want me to catch my death of cold?

Did She?

Do you know, Ethel, said Grace, I overheard George say to Fred that although he loves me and wants to propose, whenever he is near me he is too nervous to speak?

Ethel—I suppose you will be calling him up on the telephone soon.

Anaemic Condition or Bloodlessness

A peculiar pallor or even ghastliness of the skin is the marked symptom of anaemia. The eyelids, gums and lips appear to be almost bloodless. The cause of this condition is the absence of red corpuscles from the blood.

The anaemic patient is usually thin and weak, but may be fleshy and inclined to drowsy. Stomach troubles and weakness of the bodily organs are accompaniments.

Red corpuscles must be added to the blood, and this can best be accomplished by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This great food cure is so gentle and natural in action that it is admirably suited for the use of women and girls suffering from anaemia or other diseases which arise from an impoverished condition of the blood.

It is readily assimilated, enters the blood streams and carries health and strength to every organ of the body.

The vigor of the digestive system is quickly restored, and the food taken into the body is properly digested and nourishment supplied to the whole system.

To get well and keep well you must supply the body with an abundance of pure, rich blood. Nothing can be better than Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

LOCAL AND GENERAL.

Commercial travellers continue to state that Gleichen is the best town of its size they do business in in Alberta. They have a good opportunity of judging.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney J. Curtis are happy in the arrival of a daughter at their home in Gleichen on Monday, May 19th.

Empire Day—tomorrow, Friday—is to be a red-letter day in Namaka according to Mayor Mike Brown. The good people of Strathmore have promised to be present in large numbers and bring football and baseball teams for Namaka to beat. The mayor wonders how many will be present from Gleichen and points out that they should all be there as the "local" train should be convenient for all Gleichenites. Besides the ball games other good sport will be provided and a good time assured to one and all. He ventures to say that a goodly number from Namaka will return to Gleichen for Victoria day.

Monday, more of J. D. McArthur's contracting outfit arrived in Gleichen from the S. A. L. Co's works, and was shipped the following day to Wetaskiwin where he has secured another big contract. The outfit consisted of over 60 teams, with wagons, scrapers, dump-cars, plows, etc.

It is stated that the local Liberal Association has approved of the Farmer's Union recommendation of the appointment of N. N. Hayes as weed inspector for the Gleichen district and that accordingly he will be inspector for this year. Mr. Hayes is well qualified for the position, and, considering the recent judgment rendered by Judge Walsh, his responsibilities should be considerably lightened. The position of weed inspector is not an enviable one by any means as he must use great discretion in applying the law. In some cases he may have to deal with farmers are doing their utmost to eradicate the weeds, but if they were forced to do all the work in one or two years they would perhaps be obliged to quit the business while in other cases some with only a few weeds are doing very little.

The judgment of the Supreme Court, by Mr. Justice Walsh awarding a farmer substantial damages against his neighbor on account of the latter's failure to properly clear his land of noxious weeds, which in consequence of this negligence contaminated the adjacent fields of the aggrieved party, is one of far-reaching importance.

The emphatic way in which the anti-weed law was sustained and the severe penalty meted out to the offender establishes a precedent to which every farmer in Alberta, and especially those who through carelessness have allowed their land to become infested with noxious weeds must pay attention.

It puts a powerful weapon into the hands of the man who is trying to keep his land clean, of which we imagine he will not be slow to take advantage. There will be no more waiting on the off chance that the hard-worked weed inspectors will not notice any delinquency. The culprit cannot escape liability and the probability is that there will be a lively cleaning up this year in quarters where almost criminal negligence and downright laziness have already given the weeds a foothold that will be hard to eradicate.

But a judgment of $632 and costs will cause the most hardened offender to sit up and take notice.—McLeod Advertiser.

Early Monday morning, Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Brown were awakened from their slumbers by a noise and cry. Each felt for the other and their baby. All was well. The cry continued and so did the noise. The cry was most pitiful and rubbing his eyes Bobby was quite sure some terrible tragedy was being enacted. He thought it was either a woman or child being, well, perhaps, murdered, inside or outside the house. Trembling, he arose and peered out the bedroom window, but saw nothing, then clad in his night-robe stole silently in his bare feet into the dining room and kitchen with the same result. Returning the noise sounded in the spare bedroom the door of which was closed. Cautiously he knelt down and placed his ear close to the bottom of the door and just as he did so once more the pitiful wail was heard, but this time it seemed in the cellar. It took time to recover his nerves but he finally approached the cellar trap door and raising it saw two flaming eyes peering at him, when it dawned on him it must be a coyote, and he returned to bed. In the morning he once more raised the trap door to observe the coyote, but he thought it wise not to venture down to combat with so fierce an animal in captivity and thought he would leave it until noon by which time
